Invitation to take part in the conference

The proposed title of the conference addresses the diverse and complex problems of macro- and micro-social scale. Beginning of the 21st century raises the issues of population's migrations in the political, economical and cultural aspect. It is not a new phenomenon, as Europe in the 19th and 20th centuries has already experienced similar processes. Also in the microscale, family entangled in economical, cultural and political relations experiences support, but also danger. An important role here may be played by psychological and health relations. Diverse situations in which this most important social cell fulfils its tasks may lead to the feeling of stabilisation, but also to a conflict of interests of its members and to danger of its functioning.

In the context of the above theoretical considerations, in regard to family of the 19th-21st centuries we can formulate the following questions: What influence on the durability and the realisation of the fundamental functions by the family had (have) the migrations of populations in 19th- 21st centuries? To what degree can national and family tradition influence durability of family, ability to solve problems in the face of danger and conflict? In what way should state, social and private initiatives support the family? How do representatives of social sciences and humanities view situations of the mentioned conflicts and threats? To what degree the problems of family are present in the legal and political discourses, is it present in the discourse of health sciences?

We kindly invite all academics and teachers of Universities and Colleges as well as everyone interested in family to take part in the conference. The participants will be able to voice their studies and opinions in family discourse by publishing papers in the following issues of the journal "Family Upbringing" (ISSN: 2082-9019, eISSN: 2300-5866) – the electronic version is available on the website: www.wwr.uni.wroc.pl. The journal is indexed in numerous databases. The organisers plan also to publish Book of abstracts of conference papers.

During the plenary session organisers provide Polish-English translation. Topical sessions will proceed in Polish or English, depending on the preferences of the participants. The organisers also consider the possibility to organize a Russian language session at the demand of at least 12 participants who prefer Russian.

To take part of the conference, one needs to send the application and transfer the conference fee to the account of the organiser. The conference fee of 550 PLN (150 EUR) is paid by all the participants. The organisers provide the conference materials, coffee breaks during proceedings, lunch, solemn dinner, and most of all publishing in print the positively reviewed (double blind peer-review) papers in the following volumes of the journal "Family Upbringing". Organisers do not provide accommodation for the participants of the conference; however, if reservation is made before 1st of March 2016, in Hotel "Kryształ" or Hotel "Agat" in Szklarska Poręba, there is a discount for participants of the conference.
